Recruitment call for the DAiSY project for young school aged children with significant visual impairment (4 to 7 year olds)

Would you and your child like to take part in an exciting research study?

The DAiSY project (Development and Assessment of Social Interaction for children with visual impairment) is a new project designed to learn more about the social development of children with visual impairment.

We are looking for 4-7 year olds with visual impairment in England and Wales

Young children with childhood visual disorders may have challenges in learning to socially relate to other people and to communicate successfully. As well as learning more about the social development of children with vision loss/visual impairment this study also aims to
