

UCL Research Ethics Committee

G

Recording consent

As regards consent to research, many of the concerns raised by respondents to our public consultation and by those who attended our fact-finding meetings related to the process by which consent was recorded. A common observation was that consent forms often seemed to be designed to protect sponsors of research, pharmaceutical companies and researchers, ra

