Report on our first year

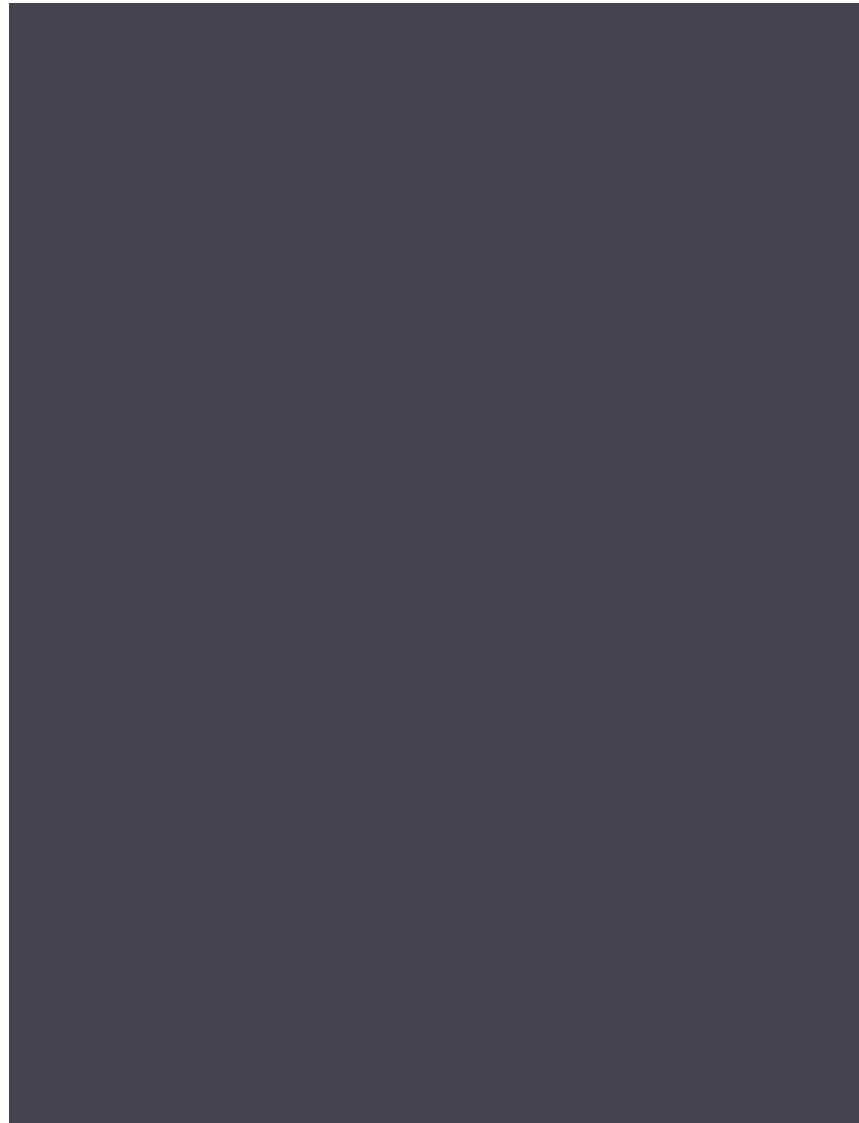

“For the first time I truly began to understand what a multi-disciplinary powerhouse UCL is when it comes to transport. The potential significance of the Transport Institute has fallen into place.”

— Dr. David Forster, Director of the Transport Institute

The UCL Transport Institute was founded with three principal goals:

- q To foster cross-disciplinary transport research
- q To increase the policy impact of transport research
- q To build UCL's profile in relation to transport

Transport Select Committee

As a result of the Transport Select Committee's work, the Government has agreed to fund a new transport infrastructure programme of £10 billion over the next five years. This will be used to fund a range of transport infrastructure projects, including roads, bridges, and public transport. The Government has also agreed to fund a new transport infrastructure programme of £10 billion over the next five years.
